Lifeways in Scotland

Supporting people in Scotland to live the life they choose

We believe people have the right to live the life they choose. We support people all over Scotland with a diverse range of disabilities, from learning disabilities, autism and autism spectrum conditions to acquired brain injuries and mental health issues. We support them in their own homes, in purpose built supported living apartments, shared accommodation and residential care homes. We also run a day respite centre.

We support over 550 people from the Highlands to Dumfries, with a network of 5 regional offices across the country and management teams based in Scotland.

Support shaped around individual needs

Operating under 2 of our 9 group brands, we offer person-centred services that place the people we support at the centre of their care.

Whether it's supporting people for a few hours a week in their own home or 24 hour residential care, we provide structured, skilled and consistent support that is tailored to each individual. By working in partnership with individuals, family members, care managers and health professionals, we plan and deliver successful outcomes for everyone we support.

Where we are

Flexible and innovative support

Our goal is to make a positive difference in the lives of everyone we support. All our services are designed to provide the opportunity, encouragement and experiences to develop life skills and progress to maximum independence.

Our reputation and resources enable us to provide a strong support structure to our teams of local professionals. We have a broad base of specialist learning disabilities knowledge, drawn from expertise across numerous specialisms across Scotland, along with the local knowledge and expertise of people who are already part of the community. This combination helps us to develop our innovative approach to care and support.

Our people

We work hard to recruit, train and keep motivated and highly skilled staff who are dedicated to supporting people with sometimes complex and challenging needs. We offer competitive rates of pay and a clear pathway of training and development for all our staff. This includes a comprehensive induction and access to the training and qualifications that will maximise the potential of everyone who works for us.

We are Stonewall Diversity Champions.

We are an affiliate member of Scottish Care.

Committed to quality

We're dedicated to driving improvement across our services, guided by both external accreditation and input from the people we care for and their support networks.

Person-centred approaches are used across the organisation and every employee works in a person-centred way. We are promoting co production and consultation with the people we support, families, carers, staff and stakeholders.

There are two Our Voice ambassadors who represent the people we support in Scotland ensuring that their voices are heard across the whole organisation.
